

Let's at least put on a light

Hello dear friends, peace be with you!

I admit I am worried!

Syria is standing before a new military intervention, and I am sitting praying and cannot believe that again heavy arms will have the say and any kind of dialogue is failing. I know that many of you are feeling the same way. Two days ago a good friend of mine wrote to me the same.

What then can we do?

I want to invite you every night to put up a light, in your windows or anywhere. Let this be a small sign that we are remembering the people who are affected, that we are praying for them and foster thoughts of sympathy, and that in our hearts the hope is burning that peace is no utopia. Let us together burn a candle every night for the frightened children, for the mothers and fathers, for the youths, for the old and for the sick in Syria, for those in the war but also for the decision-makers. Don't let's capitulate before the war machinery, let's at least set a simple sign of peace. And let those pray who are still able to do so.

Please hand on this appeal, then all over the world candles will burn for Syria and for the peace.

Yours Sr. Christina
